MISS IONA RICHARDS, daughter of Mrs. Hattie Richards of 125 West Farming street, became the bride of John J. Damp of Tiffin in a ceremony read this morning at Trinity Baptist church. Open church was observed for the single ring service read by the pastor, Rev. Lawrence A. Wood, at 10:30 o'clock.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Cecil Davis played a half hour program of nuptial music. Her numbers were "Serenade," Gounod, "I Love You Truly," Bond, "Venetian Love Song," Nevin, "To a Wild Rose," MacDowell, "Pale Moon," Logan, "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," Seitz, "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling," Tate, and "All For You," DrLhart. As the bridal party proceeded down the aisle she played the "Bridal Chorus," from Wagner's "Lohengrin" and as the couple repeated their vows she played "Dream of Love," by Liszt. For the recessional Mrs. Davis played the Mendelssohn "Wedding March."

White tapers in two seven-branch candelabra lighted the altar which was banked with ferns and palms, providing a setting for two tall baskets filled with white peonies.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother, James W. Richards, who gave her in marriage. Her wedding gown of white organza was fashioned with a long, full skirt which was graduated into a short train. The bodice had a Queen Ann collar and the bell of blue gros grain ribbon formed a bolero effect and was caught with a small bow at the high neckline. The blue was repeated in the tiny chenille dots which trimmed the short puffed sleeves. Her picture hat was of horsehair and trimmed with a large water lily in the front, and she wore white mitts. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of blue delphinium, Johanna Hill roses and gypsophila tied with blue ribbon.

Mrs. Arthur Zachman of Toledo was the matron of honor. She wore a gown of peach colored net fashioned on long lines with a wide, full skirt. A double frill of the net formed the collar and trimmed the front of the bodice which had short, puffed sleeves. Her small net turban was in the same shade and had a short net veil. She ware pumps and gloves in harmonizing tones. Her flowers, arranged in an arm bouquet, were Talon roses, blue delphinium and daisies, held with a large ribbon bow in a peach shade.

Arthur Zachman of Toledo was Mr. Damp's best man and the ushers were Glen Penry and Roscoe Rank of Marion.

Following the ceremony the bride and bridegroom received their friends in an informal reception in the church parlors which was decorated with ferns, palms and baskets of garden flowers. Later a wedding breakfast for the bridal party and immediate families was served in the presidential suite at Hotel Harding. A wedding cake centered the table and decorations were summer garden flowers.

The bride's mother wore for the wedding a costume of dark sheer silk which she wore a white hat and necessories. Her flowers were a shoulder corsage of gardenias. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Omn Damp of Tiffin, wore a jacket ensemble in white and her flowers were roses and sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. Damp will motor east and north on their wedding trip. For traveling the bride chose a two piece dress in British tan, button trimmed and made with a high neckline and box shoulders. The sleeves graduated into tight, elbow length cuffs. Her hat, purse and gloves were in white. They will be at home after Aug. 1 at 135 North Monroe street in Tiffin.

Mrs. Damp was graduated from Harding High school and is a former president of Gamma Mu chapter, Delta Theta Tau sorority. She has been employed as cashier at the Western Union office here.

Mythical Name Puzzled Marion County Pioneers

Because he talked so much about a place called Catawabus the early history of Marion is colored by a wagon train owner whom everyone in the early days of the city knew as "Catawabus."

Few of the pioneers were widely read and traveled, and they knew nothing of this place called Catawabus about which a man by the name of Farmington talked so much when he came to the city, carrying orders to and from wholesale dealers for the needs of Marion merchants.

Writers for The American Guide, the handbook which is being prepared by the Federal Writers Project, unearthed the story of the loquacious Farmington.

A pioneer merchant, Capt. Elisha Hardy, who operated a store on North Main street, prepared an order for a considerable quantity of stock and attached a note, "Let Catawabus have this order of goods."

The wholesale dealer read the note aloud in the presence of Farmington, neither could understand the "Catawabus" postscript and Farmington arrived in Marion without Hardy's merchandise.

Hardy was with the group of merchants awaiting the arrival of the wagon train, and he questioned the driver, who said his name was Farmington and that he knew no driver by the name of Catawabus, but that Hardy's order was at the wholesale house, awaiting the arrival of that particular driver.

There was nothing for Hardy to do but explain as best he could and keep his customers waiting until the next supply wagon visited the city.

COMMONS VOTE BACKS BALDWIN

...atives Subjected to Lashing by Laborites but Confidence Unshaken.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 30—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's government was attacked as "a danger to the country and the peace and security of the world," last night, but won a vote of confidence in the commons debate.

After the premier and his war minister, Alfred Duff Cooper, were subjected to a bitter tongue-lashing by Labor leaders, a technical Labor motion for adjournment of the debate based on Duff Cooper's speech recently in Paris, was rejected 284 to 126 in the balloting, which in effect was a vote of confidence.

The debate was called to discuss declarations made by cabinet ministers outside parliament which the Labor faction contended were in conflict with Britain's declared policy.

Baldwin was absent during the proceedings, and Clement R. Attlee, Labor leader, sarcastically referred to him as "Little Boy Blue who is fond of sleep."

Herbert Morrison, closing the case for the Laborites, charged the government was "at sixes and sevens."

"We are not a team," he said, "it is an aggregation of conflicting views. It is a danger to our country and the peace and security of the world.

"The truth is the government has got into a state of utter irresponsibility in the conduct of foreign affairs."

A loud cheer from opposition members went up when Morrison declared ministers like Duff Cooper ought to be kept under control: it is bad for the country and bad for the peace of the world."

Duff Cooper did not participate in the debate, but he heard Sir John Simon, home secretary, and Winston Churchill, Conservative, come to his defense after Morrison joined other Laborites in charging he had promised an unrestricted alliance with France in case of war, "pre-supposing it will be against Germany."

Both Simon and Churchill denied the war minister advocated a military alliance in his speech to a French audience in Paris June 26.

Sir John added:

"I ought to make it quite clear there is no closing of the door on the possibility of agreement with peaceful Germany."

The prime minister's absence gave rise to rumors he intends to resign soon, but his friends said he was only taking a rest.

Parallel Paths Mark Rival Nominees' Rise

HE HOLDS THE JOB...

Franklin D. Roosevelt was 50 years old when he received the Democratic nomination for president in 1932.

Two terms as governor of New York had put him in the national spotlight.

His first came in 1928. In the year of the Hoover landslide he won by a plurality of 25,000 votes.

The second came in 1930. His plurality had grown to 725,000.

Significant was the fact that he carried New York narrowly in 1928 while the Democratic presidential nominee, Alfred E. Smith, lost it.

In 1930, when the victorious Republican party was consolidating its lines, his enormous plurality marked him a national political figure.

Gubernatorial measures that increased his state following were a continuation of the "progressive" legislation initiated by Governor Smith, his predecessor, cheap waterpower and conservation.

"Stop Roosevelt" movements were launched as the Democratic national convention moved on to Chicago. Three ballots sufficed to name Roosevelt. A switch in the John N. Garner forces facilitated the outcome. Garner became Roosevelt's running mate.

A hustling go-getter directed Roosevelt's pre-convention drive and was named national Democratic chairman, James A. Farley, who became postmaster general, organized "Roosevelt-for-President" blocs in every state long before the convention met. The late Louis McHenry Howe, a former newspaperman, was the candidate's most intimate adviser.

Shattering precedent, Roosevelt flew immediately to Chicago from Albany to accept the nomination.

Born January 30, 1882, Roosevelt was the son of wealthy, aristocratic parents. On both sides his forebears date from the early days of American colonization. His birthplace was his father's ancestral home at Hyde Park, N. Y. He studied law and practiced in New York City until politics called him.

His wife, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, is his sixth cousin and niece of President Theodore Roosevelt. There are five children: Anna Eleanor, James, John, Elliott and Franklin Jr.

...HE'S AFTER IT

Alf M. Landon was 49 years old when he received the Republican nomination for President in 1936.

Two terms as governor of Kansas had put him in the national spotlight.

His first came in 1932. In a three-way contest he won by a plurality of 5,000 votes.

The second came in 1934. His plurality had grown to 62,000.

Significant was the fate that he was one of five Republican governors elected in 1932 while the Republican presidential nominee, Herbert C. Hoover, lost.

In 1934, when the victorious Democratic party was consolidating its lines, he was the only Republican state governor re-elected.

Gubernatorial measure that attracted national attention for him were economies in state government, from the executive mansion down. These won him the appellation of "the Kansas Coolidge."

"Stop Landon" movements were launched as the Republican national convention moved on to Cleveland. He was named on the first ballot. Support of the Frank Knox forces helped make his vote unanimous. Knox became Landon's running mate.

A hustling go-getter directed Landon's pre-convention drive and was named national Republican chairman, John D. M. Hamilton, a young Kansas lawyer, organized the "Landon-for-President" movement. William Allen White, of Emporia, Kas., and Roy Roberts, of Kansas City, newspapermen, were among the candidate's most intimate advisers.

Shattering precedent, Landon telegraphed to Cleveland his "interpretation" of the platform before his nomination.

Born September 9, 1887, Landon was the son of an Ohio oil production superintendent. His ancestors, of New England lineage, had been early Pennsylvania farmers. His birthplace was his grandfather's Methodist parsonage at West Middlesex, Pa. He studied law, but engaged in the oil business until politics called him.

His wife, the former Theo Cobb, was the socially prominent daughter of a Topeka banker. There are three children: Peggy Anne, daughter of the governor's first wife, and Nancy Jo and John Cobb.

PRISONER GIVEN TERM FOR ATTACK

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 30—Gerhard Le Buda, 23-year-old prisoner at the federal reformatory at Chillicothe, who asserted inhuman treatment of other inmates caused him to attack an institution dentist, must serve two more years when his present five-year term is up.

Federal Judge Mell G. Underwood imposed the additional sentence late yesterday despite Le Buda's plea that the alleged treatment to other inmates "momentarily crazed" him and that in this state he assaulted Dr. Arthur G. Malachy.

WINNERS IN CHURCH CONTEST ARE FETED

Special to The Star

CLARIDON, O., June 29—A covered-dish dinner for 45 members and guests was served at the Claridon township house Thursday noon by the losing side in an attendance contest of the Claridon M. E. church. The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, July 1 —

A FAIRLY lively and enterprising day is read from the prevailing planetary configurations, although it is possible that the social, domestic or affectional life may require much attention. In this connection there are auguries of romance, courtship or marriage and the friendship of those in important places will be profitable as well as pleasant.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of advancement in position and prestige, with personal popularity and romantic adventure claiming the attention rather than sordid affairs.

A child born on this day may be talented and enterprising, and his friendliness and kindly nature will insure him personal popularity and advanced position in life.

Seven-Year-Old Child Feared Suffering from Infantile Paralysis.

TIVOLI, Italy, June 30—Anna Maria Mussolini, youngest daughter of Premier Mussolini of Italy, is feared to be suffering from an attack of infantile paralysis.

State affairs have waited two days as Premier Mussolini and his wife have remained by the little girl's bedside.

Vittorio and Bruno, Il Duce's eldest sons, were summoned from Rome Saturday when lung complications were gravest for their sister, but the official Stefani News agency said tonight the crisis was over. Townsfolk prayed in churches.

Fascist sources said Romano, eight-year-old son of Il Duce and his wife, also was ill, but they did not specify the nature of his sickness.

A number of parents were taking their children from Rome because of rumors of an epidemic.

Watson, the Skillet.

Something more than chivalry accounts for national committeewomen, lady cabinet officials and political clubs for women voters. Women are winning their places in politics by hard work and tangible results.

Nevertheless, there still remains a distinction between women in the role of home makers and in the role of party workers. Mrs. Margaret Allman of Canton, Ohio, welfare director, is getting close to hot skillets when she advises Democratic wives to start converting their Republican husbands.

The 1936 campaign already threatens to set brother against brother. Wives and husbands had better be left out of it. In the first place, it is doubtful if any wife ever converted a husband to her political point of view. The brute isn't made that way.

In the second place, has Mrs. Allman considered the possibility that the husbands, in retaliation, might loose some of their traditional political persuasiveness on their wives and spoil the game for the Democratic side? Everything considered, politics had better be played pianissimo in the region between the front and back doors of the American home or the country will have another problem on its hands.

Comparisons.

The supreme court in Canada has invalidated much of the so-called new deal legislation enacted last year by the Bennett government. An employment and marketing act similar to NRA and a social security measure are among those upon which the court ax has fallen.

Apart from the merit or demerits of the acts concerned or the wisdom of the judicial decisions, the factor calling for reflection is the similarity between the situation in Canada and that in the United States. Threatened by the mounting wave of depression, Canadians swept Premier Bennett's liberal party into power. Soon thereafter Mr. Bennett showed he had been studying President Roosevelt's administration and embarked on a legislative course designed to give the Dominion government power to cope with economic and social problems. The result was the legislation now passed upon by the supreme court.

Over in France Premier Blum appears also to have made more than a casual survey of new deal methods in this country. At the moment he is pushing through the chamber and senate a series of measures regulating, principally, employer-employe relations in industry. The American new deal frequently is being mentioned in debate and many pro and con arguments remind one of the oratorical exchanges that have taken place at Washington.

Since France, unlike Canada, does not have the federal form of government or the procedure of judicial review, an analogy linking the three countries might appear invalid. Yet it cannot be gainsaid that France, Canada and the United States all have sought to lead their peoples out of the valley of depression by laying the strong hand of government upon the economic forces of the nation. Just as fascism and dictatorship have their imitators, so, it appears, does Mr. Roosevelt's new deal appeal to other perplexed governments. Students of government might decry the trend but they cannot deny it.

The Genuine Thing.

Busy men of affairs whose signatures are required on great numbers of letters and documents have discovered two days to circumvent the limitations of time and strength. Some of them permit their names to be signed by persons who can write passable imitations of the official signatures. The other method is a rubber stamp signature, which is, of course, an exact facsimile. Yet, it fools nobody.

A recent flurry of criticism has brought forth from Postmaster General Farley an explanation that his signature on a letter soliciting campaign funds from fourth class postmasters was of the rubber stamp variety and, therefore, unofficial. Without going into the merits of Mr. Farley's not wholly convincing defense, there remains an important point to be made.

Rubber stamp signatures always are unconvincing. Even the very best ones, carefully inked and adorned with flourishes to make them look like the genuine thing, fall far short of their purpose. The receiver of such a phoney missive is likely to reflect that if the signer can't give the matter his personal attention he probably is spreading his influence too thinly over too wide a slice of affairs. Mr. Farley's little affair possibly may remind other men of affairs that if the most they can offer is a rubber stamp they can't expect to get much in return.

Making Civil Service Attractive.

The perennial problem of civil service in governmental work is sure to be mentioned frequently in the coming campaign, with the ins and the outs both expressing piety of intention. Yet it is safe to assume the next congress won't enact laws putting, for instance, 95 per cent of federal employes under the merit system.

Even if the next administration should reverse the present trend, one could not be sure the civil service problem would be on the way toward solution. Back of the issue of taking politics out of governmental service is the more important matter of trained personnel. How much of a gain would be made if present jobholders merely were guaranteed permanence of employment? Is John Doe, because he passes an intelligence and general knowledge test, fitted to be a third class postmaster or worthy of advancement?

Granted that permanence of employment and retirement on pensions attract a higher type of applicant, the present examination system mitigates against a substantial increase in quality of personnel. There is, for instance, a tendency to ask that the would-be clerk in the postoffice or department of state possess just enough qualifications to guarantee his success in that post—and no more.

Students of the problem concede Great Britain attracts a high type of men and women to its governmental service. Part of the explanation lies in the fact that examinations are designed to show the applicant's general intelligence and adaptability. Experience seems to justify the theory that the keen brain will adapt itself to the peculiarities of any particular department and show ability to develop and advance. The incentive given by the wide possibilities of advancement induces many brilliant persons to enter the service.

Speaking before the Kiwanis International convention, Will Durant, author, focused attention on the problem. In particular he stressed the desirability of training men and women for government service, possibly through specialized departments in universities. If he appeared to plead for a narrowly vocational training, he dispelled that impression when he declared "we make education a disqualification for public service." It is not too far fetched to believe he also was realizing civil service does not attract the better equipped of American youth partly because the examinations suggest a limited sphere of action.

As with all problems, the causal factors involved in improving governmental personnel are multiple, not singular. Making the examination system more attractive to educated persons would be one direct approach, however.

Business Is Good.

There are fight fans who never thought Jack Sharkey was much of a fighter. There are others who don't see how he possibly could be much of a fighter three years after retirement at the end of a spotty career.

Nevertheless, the former heavyweight champion won a fight the other night and now is being mentioned for a match with Max Baer or Joe Louis. At least one comeback experiment seems to be coming along all right.

Why does Sharkey want to come back, and why are fight promoters willing to give him encouragement? Possibly, attendance figures for his latest fight give the answer. Eight thousand people paid more than $13,000 to see the fight.

When the statisticians and politicians are on the search for signs that business is good, they shouldn't forget about Jack Sharkey. If it were to become very much hotter, Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney might tuck in their beards and hit the comeback trail, too. A fighter's never too old to earn.

Today Ends Another U. S. Fiscal Year

And Question Still Remains Unanswered as to Why New Deal Is To Spend More Than in 1936.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright, 1936, by The Marion Star

WASHINGTON, June 30—Today is the end of another fiscal year for the government of the United States.

Judging by what one heard at the new deal convention last week, the American people are asked to believe that recovery is here or well on its way, that President Roosevelt and his policies have brought recovery, in fact have rescued the country from the depths of despair in 1932.

Yet, as the figures are made available, it now appears that the deficits are bigger each year and the amount to be spent for relief in 1937 will far exceed what was spent in 1933—the time when civilization in America was supposed to be nearing an end.

The total debt since the depression started is now in the neighborhood of $18,000,000,000 of which about $4,000,000,000 was incurred during the Hoover administration and about $14,000,000,000 since March 4, 1933.

No official explanation has been given as to why relief expenditures are to be larger in the fiscal year which begins tomorrow than they were in the fiscal year just ending. Nor has there been any lack of curiosity on the subject. Senator Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia, tried to find out on the last day congress was in session and he questioned Senator Barkley, Democrat, of Kentucky, who was to be the keynote speaker at the Philadelphia convention and hence might be presumed to speak with knowledge and authority. Here is an excerpt from the debate:

"Senator Barkley: No senator on this floor who has demanded a reduction of the expenditures of our government has as yet pointed out where that reduction ought to be made.

* * *

"Senator Byrd: I can point out where the reduction can be made.

"Mr. Barkley: Very well.

"Mr. Byrd: I offered an amendment to the deficiency appropriation to reduce the relief appropriation 20 per cent. That amendment was defeated. And now I want to ask the senator at this point whether he thinks the national government should spend $1,000,000,000 more in the fiscal year 1937 than it will spend in the fiscal year 1936 in view of the improvement in conditions throughout the country.

"Mr. Barkley: I say the government ought to spend $1,000,000,000 or any other amount that is necessary to keep American men, women and children from starving to death or freezing in the winter from cold.

"Mr. Byrd: Does the senator think that more money will be needed in 1937 to keep them from starving and freezing than is needed in 1936?"

There was no answer on that point and the debate digressed somewhat, after which Senator Byrd came back to the same point thus:

"Does the senator from Kentucky favor spending $1,000,000,000 more in the fiscal year 1937 than was spent in the fiscal year 1936?"

To which Senator Barkley replied:

"I favor what I have voted for, and I have voted for all these appropriations."

So the records on this matter of increasing expenses in the fiscal year 1937—which begins tomorrow—are unable to furnish a guide as to the reasons which actuated the legislative body and the executive in asking for more money for next year than the preceding year.

* * *

When the fiscal year 1936 which ended today is fully audited, it will be discovered that President Roosevelt's promise of a gradually receding deficit each year has not been kept. The latest official figures, those of June 28, show the following comparisons with last year at this time, given in round numbers:

	This Year	Last Year
Expenses	$8,793,000,000	$7,268,000,000
Receipts	4,080,000,000	3,795,000,000
Deficit	4,080,000,000	3,472,347,804
Public Debt ...	33,950,505,453	28,665,773,453

Thus it will be seen that expenses are more than $1,500,000,000 higher and the deficit is about $1,300,000,000 bigger than last year, notwithstanding the fact that receipts are higher too.

It will be argued by the administration that much of the bonus money is included in this year's expense, in fact nearly all of it. Conceding this as having had a bearing on the deficit incurred, Senator Byrd's question is still unanswered—why is it that in the fiscal year beginning tomorrow, July 1, 1936, and running to June 30, 1937, the official estimate made by the director of the budget shows that the government of the United States under the new deal administration intends, if it remains in power beyond January next, to spend for the full fiscal year $8,272,654,370?

Such an amount is in excess of every one of the three years of the Roosevelt administration and the year 1937 (eliminating all bonus expenses) in fact is to be the biggest year of spending of all the four years of the new deal.

Nobody at the new deal convention has explained the reason and nobody here in Washington since the convention has offered any explanation. More will be heard of this in the campaign, for the new dealers can hardly contend that recovery isn't here and yet that more money has to be spent now than in the years when the nation was rescued, as the President phrases it, from disaster in 1933.

The Republicans are wickedly suggesting that the explanation is to be found in the fact that there is an election being held in the year 1936 and that a political organization has to be maintained through current expenditure for public works projects and for "relief." But such an explanation would only imply that, if the new deal wins the prize, it will cut down expenses. This is not corroborated by the plans and commitments made for the next five years which are to be of increased scope and magnitude in various fields in which the government has already embarked. The deficits keep growing, tax revenues are inadequate to meet the expenses, and the trend of the public debt is higher and higher. That's the news on this, the end of the third fiscal year under the new deal.

Behind the News

Men and Affairs Under The Washington Spotlight.

BY PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 30—The Japanese never announce their thefts. They just take what they want and let the world find out about it gradually.

In a few weeks it will be apparent that they have made a puppet Japanese city out of the ancient capital of the Chinese emperors, Peiping. The seizure is evident from diplomatic dispatches which have come to official sources here while Americans were watching the Democratic convention. These dispatches relate how two Americans, one a woman, discovered who is running Peiping.

An American cavalry captain attached to the American embassy was walking along the street one day recently when a Japanese bayonet was shoved up within an inch of his ribs. He pushed it aside before he was hurt. The bayonet was in the hands of a Japanese soldier who was clearing the way for a Japanese military parade.

The American woman was ordered off the sidewalk by a Japanese officer who is said to have emphasized his order with a saber.

American buildings have been desecrated, Japanese military demonstrations are held almost daily.

NOTE—The situation has been the subject of secret conferences among the representatives of foreign powers in Peiping. All the foreign diplomats can do is to deplore the situation. None of their governments want to start anything until something more serious develops. It will.

Influence

It seems that once mighty nations, whose word was international law, can no longer command simple diplomatic respect for their viewpoints among the international roughnecks.

The abject retreat of the British from their Ethiopian position caused all diplomats here to wag their heads and comment on the new order of world behavior. They saw it meant that Il Duce has won not only a military victory in Ethiopia but a diplomatic victory in Europe. The diplomatic retreat of Britain is of even greater importance for Il Duce because it means greater prestige.

Insiders here generally attribute both retreats to the same cause—unpreparedness. Britain, they say, was not in a position to fight, and Mussolini knew it. But Britain has not forgotten. Its fears of Il Duce have not abated. It can afford to be patient and choose its time.

Near Sightedness

It will be denied officially, but the United States government has just made its own graceful bow to the conqueror of Ethiopia. A private understanding with Rome is supposed to have been reached in connection with the coming of the new Italian envoy, former Foreign Minister Suvich.

The state department has agreed to accept him as the representative of "the King of Italy and the Emperor of Ethiopia." But, inasmuch as we are a party to two treaties pledging us not to recognize the conqueror of Ethiopia, we have slipped the word to Rome that this recognition of Suvich as envoy of the king and emperor does not mean that we recognize the emperor half of his title.

The distinction will not be apparent to any one except a diplomat. The state department will argue that we do not recognize the Italian conquest of Ethiopia by accepting the envoy because the intent of recognition is not involved.

This is a bit thick even for diplomacy, but the truth of the matter is there was nothing more practical to be done about it. The Italians were adamant about sending Suvich. We did not want to break off diplomatic relations.

Advantage

Two very good underlying purposes inspired the Japanese cabinet to reject the London naval treaty the other day.

Japan is determined to snub all American and British naval proposals short of absolute parity. Our people have known that for a long time. They have held no hope privately that Japan would adhere to the treaty, although they continued to express hopes aloud.

Secondly, Japan believes she can put one over on the rest of the world by remaining out of the treaty. That document provides six months' advance notice of naval building plans of signatories. Japan is under the impression that our parliamentary form of government will give her all the information she needs on our building program. This information must be made public through submission to congress in advance.

On the other hand, the Japanese navy does not have to reveal its building programs in the Japanese parliament. They can build in secret, while we build in public.

At least that is what they think.

New York Notes

O. O. McIntyre's Diary of Fact, Fancy and Folks.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Bernarr Macfadden seems New York's most unpredictable headline hopper. If he's not in the news for sponsoring a bunion derby he is running for president. One thing is certain, he's about the most vigorous figure hereabouts for one of 68 years.

Thus he somewhat befuddles the scoffers at his health and diet theories. Sometimes he walks barefoot from his up-the-Hudson estate and at other times he pilots his own airplane. Much of his life he has been the energetic crusader, switching from one thing to another.

He sponsored physical culture restaurants, magazines and gymnastic resorts. If a venture does not turn out successful in a short while, he knocks it in the head and forgets. He has published 12 fairly successful magazines and the most spectacular of all newspaper flops—The Graphic.

Even those who believe many of his enterprises are sheer absurdities do not doubt his earnestness. And once captivated by an idea, nothing can persuade him to abandon it. He has amassed a fortune and has given large sums to charity.

John V. A. Weaver, book critic and husband of Peggy Wood, has confessed in a magazine article he is beginning to glance at his greatest literary idol for clay feet. He is referring to Ernest Hemingway. For most of his writing years Hemingway has been Weaver's inspiration, his literary god. And then came the endless flood of fishing essays—and almost nothing else—from the Hemingway pen. Weaver suspects his hero is in the way of becoming the reading world's greatest bore and winds up with this stinger: "Everybody says you've gone soft; you're accused of being coin conscious, lazy, cynical; of cashing in on your reputation, of racketeering your signature." My, my, gentlemen! Also: "Boo!"

From the sidewalk the other day I noticed seven women, all youngish, drinking at a bar in West 52d street. The only men about were the bar tenders. Feminine tippling at the brass rail is a product of the speakeasy area. And has burgeoned the treating habit so prolific of drunkeness in the days of the saloon. A Park avenue doorman pointed out a smartly clad girl in her early 20's just yesterday teetering along in an alcoholic blur. "She goes on a bust like that about once a week," he said. And added: "Society dame."

* * *

Stanley Walker has discovered that The Players once blackballed Rudyard Kipling and denied the famous English author the house guest privileges. When his name came up for consideration a testy group of old timers remembered he had turned out some salty essays in which Americans and their manners were given a dressing down. It was decided if he felt that way there was no point in extending the club's hospitality.

The railroad excursion feature of American life has definitely passed. Since the turn of the century it was gradually losing amusement appeal. Once it was the high light of drably isolated lives. Every excursion had its card. It is Elmer or Roy. When the train stopped to pick up passengers he would detrain and wait until it got into a fair speed, then jerk his hat down over one eye, juffle his Adam's apple several times, hoist his pants legs, snap his galluses and show the window leaner how he could hop her. And no meal at Delmonico's in its glory had the gastronomic flavor of a shoe box packed excursion lunch. Especially those deviled eggs skewered on toothpicks and those flakey fried chicken legs.

We have never had a President who was three-score and ten upon inauguration. The oldest was Wil- ... Henry Harrison, 68, who died a month after he took office. Zach- ... Taylor, who also died in the White House, was 64, and James ... an 65. Grover Cleveland ... 47, William McKinley 55, Wil- ... H. Taft 51, Woodrow Wilson 56, Calvin Coolidge 51, Herbert Hoover 54 and Franklin Roosevelt 51. Two were younger than Cleve- ... Ulysses S. Grant, 46, and Theodore Roosevelt, 42.

A President gives one a more comfortable feeling for the security of the nation if he looks as though he could eat four square meals a day. Landon looks as though he could. In the oil fields he was much in the open air. His exercise is horseback riding. He is below me- ... height, stockily built, with ... boiler power. Since his first campaign he does not carry his troubles to bed with him. He finds six hours sleep enough.

It may not be important, but I noted that he had finely shaped, capable hands as well as a finely shaped head. They are so capable that it is said that he could shake hands with more people in an hour than any public man of his time in Kansas, there being no record of the handshaking abilities of the leaders of Kansas pioneer days.

His lips are very mobile and ex- ... from his smile to the way they set when the jaw comes up. And you are inclined to over- ... look the jaw at the outset. That jaw can be rock set in that "strain of Dutch stubbornness." All who want a President of the United States without a jaw had better ... ve Landon at once from their ... of possibilities.

... is a rounded jaw with firm ... th. If he chose he has the ap- ... paratus for a first-class radio voice. But the professions, rec- ... ognizing this and itching to coach him, had found so far that he was aloof to their training. Perhaps he notes a certain affectation in trained radio voices. He is so in- ... tent on subject matter that his in- ... clination is to let the "squeaks fall where they may. Sincerity is more important than radio facility.

His eyes have a leading part in the pleasant impression he makes on people. To me they are an unusual brown with large pupils, frequently under half-closed lids in observation or reflection, but lighting for the person whom he meets as though saying: "Here we are both, human beings, and may- ... be you have something for me and I have something for you." They are excellent helpmates for the valuable handshaking hands, which never overdo the shades, or seem to single out one human being from another with any special shake. It is the smile and the glance, swiftly without demonstra- ... tion, which do that.

I should say that in personal contacts his real gift is the ability to make any one feel at home in a few words and in a short session that has known this governor for a long time. And that is a real po- ... litical asset, which you can not learn from all the books of eti- ... quette.

XVIII
Natural in Speech

Since we are considering Lan- ... don for the Presidency and not as a radio announcer or elocutionist, I like personally the straight nat- ... ural way of his speeches. He talks right on without mouthing his words. Other citizens may hold my view. However, it has been gen- ... erally accepted that a candidate who speaks better in public than he talks in council, instead of talk- ... ing better than he speaks, has an advantage in winning votes for his election and later as Presi- ... dent in retaining his popularity through his gift for personal propa- ... ganda.

Yet, in the actual efficient per- ... formance of his duties, there may be an advantage in talking in council better than he speaks in public and even in thinking better than he talks. First, this may ap- ... ply in his ability to think better on national problems than he talks about them.

I have been frequently asked how it could be possible for a man who had rarely been in Washing- ... ton to know much about national problems. At least, he is not too much tied to certain associations, to prevent him from approaching national problems with perspective and an open mind.

James Buchanan was supposed to be well equipped for the presi- ... dency from his service in both houses of the congress and as sec- ... retary of state. Abraham Lincoln from the Illinois frontier had only one term in congress which gave him no such conventional prepara- ... tion for national administration as Stephen A. Douglas who had long experience under the dome of the national Capitol. Lincoln not only spoke well, but talked well and thought well. Even in his case, if we consider his great achievement, he may have thought better than he spoke or talked. Washington who apparently did not speak bet- ... ter than he talked—from what we know of his voice it could not have been a radio voice—was a good hand at thinking, judging by the thought he put into action.

Grover Cleveland, Woodrow Wil- ... son and Calvin Coolidge, who were fairly successful as vote winners, and have not been without tributes as Presidents—at least from their party followers—had never been much in Washington before they went to live in the White House.

A man's outlook on national problems and how he thinks about them seems to me more important than where he lives. A well-oiled inquiry pump from Kansas may accumulate more information of present value than a freely flow- ... ing well out of traditions and per- ... sonal associations in Washington. A closed mind that does not think outside its own rut may have a narrow orbit in Washington and a broad orbit out in the sticks.

Many citizens who have never held office at all take a deep inter- ... est in national affairs and are bet- ... ter informed about them than some office-holders.

When we turn to the saying that he thinks better than he talks we enter the realm of executive and administrative as opposed to forensic and parliamentary skill. The President is chief executive of the nation, not its chief parlia- ... mentarian. James Madison, the framing father of the Constitu- ... tion, had rare skill on the legisla- ... tive floor and in counsel; but his- ... torians generally agree that, as President, he was a poor executive.

A large majority of our presi- ... dents have been lawyers. Jeffer- ... son, Jackson, Lincoln, Cleveland, McKinley and Coolidge were law- ... yers. There have been several sol- ... diers, one engineer—Hoover, one newspaperman, Harding, and one business man-soldier—Washington, the planter. Landon has had legal training. It helps him to under- ... stand an act of congress, which the average layman often reads without understanding. But Lan- ... don is primarily a business man. Business success requires executive ability. But beyond that is the executive field of public admin- ... istration which require knowledge of politics. Lincoln had this; and so had Cleveland, McKinley, Theo- ... dore Roosevelt and Coolidge.

But deeper than training is the gift, the executive gift, which is anything but completely susceptible of analysis. Two great executives may seem to have different meth- ... ods, and yet the method of either cannot be expressed wholly on charts, or graphs. It is the ability to think well first, to talk well enough, and to put thought in ac- ... tion to get things done. Call it personality, call it genius, whether the man is at the head of an in- ... dustry, a university or a govern- ... ment department, it represents the ability to delegate efficient au- ... thority and the spirit of corps down the line.

The journals of the Constitutional convention reveal the concern of the framers of the Constitution in limiting the power of the president. They feared the evils of kingship, of personal rule from which a long war had freed them. From their studies of the history of govern- ... ment they well knew the danger of power going to the head of any man in high place.

Roughly it might be said that there are two broadly variant in- ... terpretations of the presidential functions. One is that all policies and all authority have a personal origin in the White House. The other is the system practiced by the governor of Kansas.

The sense of what he said on this subject seemed to me to strip the presidential functions of an accrued excess which make the presidency unnecessarily burden- ... some and complex. I found much pith in these few sentences:

"The president does not have to do it all himself. He is provided with a cabinet. He chooses his cab- ... inet and may surround himself with the highest ability and wis- ... dom in the land. I should like to see the restoration of cabinet coun- ... cils in working out administration policies. Each cabinet officer be- ... comes the trusted executive of his department in its policy, which is coordinated with the policy of the whole. The president, as chief ex- ... ecutive of the whole, has the com- ... bined wisdom of the cabinet at his disposal in making his decisions."

A cabinet officer is the executive chief of a great department which is responsible for the expenditure of vast sums of money. I think that Landon would form a great cabinet. We have examples of the type of men he likes around him in Darby, Hoch, Greenleaf, Cogswell, Scott, Beck, Harger, Guild, Harris and Wedell in the Kansas administra- ... tion. The ablest men would not hesitate to accept posts under him as President when they understood that they were to have the author- ... ity and the opportunity to make a real contribution to public service.

A cabinet officer would not find that a new departure in the policy of his own department, of which he had not been advised, had been announced from the White House as a piece of news for him to read in his morning paper. The Presi- ... dent would not try to fill all the cabinet positions in person. He would have an attorney general upon whose advice he could rely in questions of constitutionality.

In fact, he would only be Presi- ... dent. This of itself seems enough of a job for any one man. Lincoln ap- ... parently, thought that it was. There is the story of his remark—"I have not much influence with the secre- ... tary of war"—when he was asked to intercede for some favor from Stanton.

I can foresee a real cabinet coun- ... cil in which national policies would be formulated. Two cabinet offi- ... cers, or their subordinates, would not be announcing two divergent national policies in the same week. Under a Landon "we" government it might happen that a pronounce- ... ment of policy would not come from the White House but from a cabinet officer. The public would form the habit of accepting this as having permanency instead of be- ... ing subject to an early change by the President or other cabinet member, thus leaving governmental subordinates and all private inter- ... ests unable to make plans on a via- ble basis.

Days might pass in which not the President but cabinet chiefs would have the front page, and not as messenger boys. There would be a new attitude on the part of the members of the Presidential staff. They would not see all power as originating in the White House and therefore strive to make the Presi- ... dent the source of all ideas in order to augment his personal grandeur and fame.

But the President's would be the final decisions, his the motivating, if not the publicized, influence. It is easy to imagine him rising from his chair in a cabinet meeting and walking up and down with his swift steps as he considered the suggestions that had been offered. I am optimist enough to think that the spirit of his method and example would work down through the departments as it has in Kan- ... sas, and with the same effect.

He would be eventually taken for granted as President as he was as governor. It was interesting that none of his subordinates as gov- ... ernor became thunderously elo- ... quent about what a marvelous executive he was. That kind of pressing often makes me a little suspicious, as though a lawyer was working too hard to prove his case. When I put the question: "Is the governor a good executive?" I got the answer: "Is he a good execu- ... tive? He's a great executive." Is the Missouri a large river? Does Kansas grow wheat? Why ask foolish questions?

From all I learned about Landon, from all that I read of his mes- ... sages and speeches and all that I heard him say, there could be no doubt of his firm faith in our fed- ... eral system as providing all the means of efficient administration in the specific functions reserved to local state and national govern- ... ment. He would insist and want the people to insist on the ob- ... servance of these forms.

To the congress belongs the law- ... making power. If Landon were President I am sure that we should have fewer accounts in our daily news of presidential battles with the congress. The executive branch would keep within its limits and work through counsel instead of making the congress a public whip- ... ping post. The example of his suc- ... cess in dealing with the state legislature would apply in dealing with the national legislature, both being composed of human beings. His attitude would carry respect for the law-making power as such and as personified in its members. His method would be inductive in- ... stead of pedagogic. In the White House as he did in the state house at Topeka he would practice his saying: "Any man will fight if you back him into a corner." There would be less tendency than we have had in some administrations to posture the President as an en- ... battled knight scoring off the con- ... gress; less noise but more accom- ... plished.

Tomorrow: Financial and For- ... eign Affairs.

When Gov. Alf Landon goes on a vacation he usually is accompanied by his entire family, and that was the case when he left a few days ago for McGraw Ranch, near Estes Park, Colorado, where he is spending two weeks before beginning his presidential campaign. He and his family are pictured above as they waved good-bye to friends in Topeka. Others in the picture are Mrs. Landon, and Peggy Ann, Nancy Jo and John Cobb, the three children in the family. CHEAP PROJECT

Hobo Band Doesn't Cost Anybody Anything

A Marion WPA project that didn't cost sponsor or the govern- ... ment a nickel put in an appearance last week at the recreation train- ... ing institute at Delaware.

A "hobo band" organized by Clarence Lena, boys' secretary at the Marion Y. M. C. A., gave two "concerts" before the 155 young people who attended the institute, conducted by Ohio Wesleyan uni- ... versity in conjunction with WPA. The group received a week's train- ... ing in recreational work before going to work on playground proj- ... ects in cities in this district. The Marion project is to start about July 1.

"Instruments" brought into use by the seven-piece hobo band in- ... clude guitar, washboards, gas pipes, bottles and bones. The unit was organized by Mr. Lena four months ago.

"I WOULDN'T RISK MY LIFE ON ANY OTHER TIRE"

Says Louis Meyer — Only three time winner Indianapolis Race 28 33 36

EQUIP YOUR CAR WITH Firestone GUM-DIPPED TIRES for Greater Safety!

THE MASTERPIECE OF TIRE CONSTRUCTION

THERE is a reason why Louis Meyer won the 500-mile Indianapolis race this year—and why he is the only man ever to win this gruelling race three times. He always used Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires, and never experienced tire trouble of any kind.

Louis Meyer knows tire construction. He also knows that to drive for 500 consecutive miles over this hot brick track, negotiating the dangerous curves 800 times at the record-breaking average speed of 109 miles an hour, requires tires of super strength and greatest blowout protection, as a blowout on any one of the dangerous curves would likely mean instant death. By the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process every cord in the tires on Louis Meyer's car was soaked and coated with liquid rubber, thereby preventing internal friction and heat. This is the secret of the extra strength and reserve safety built into Firestone Tires.

When you make your holiday trip this week-end, you of course will not drive 109 miles per hour, but at today's higher speeds you do need tires that will give you greatest blowout protection and will stop your car up to 25% quicker. Take no chances! Let us equip your car today with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires, the safest tires built. It costs so little to protect lives worth so much!

BEST SUMMER TRADE ENJOYED BY STEEL

Experts Expect Output Rate To Gain This Week and Point to Durable Goods Buying.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., June 30—Daily Metal Trade reported today "the steel industry is enjoying the most active early summer period since pre-depression times," with the national operating rate "almost sure to advance sharply this week."

It noted a "heavy volume of durable goods buying, particularly from the railroads and shipbuilders" and said "mills are also beginning to receive some new business from the motor plants for 1937 models."

"Pig iron specifications and new buying hold steady and sustained demand is foreseen over the summer months. Scrap is showing signs of returning strength in several markets, with gradually rising quotations in prospect."

ZIONCHECK TAKES TRAIN FOR SEATTLE

vate hospital at Towson, Md., and the hour of his departure.

From the institution where he had been confined for mental treatment, he fled to his office in the new house office building in the early hours of yesterday. There he remained for many hours while Kenneth Romney, house sergeant-at-arms, posted a bond to assure Zioncheck's freedom on an assault charge, and while preparations were made for the westward journey.

After the legal barriers were thrown down, the young legislator issued a statement saying he had been "shanghaied" into both the Gallinger hospital here and into the Maryland institution.

He declared that had he not escaped from Towson, "I am certain that I would have qualified for an insane asylum in the very near future."

Minister in Christiansburg Disturbance Faces Criminal Libel Charge.

By The Associated Press

URBANA, O., June 30—Rev. B. B. Fleming awaited today trial of a criminal libel charge filed against him by Mr. and Mrs. Willis Jenkins, whom he protected from an enraged crowd at nearby Christiansburg a year ago.

Mr. Fleming, now in the insurance business at Fairfield, O., pleaded innocent to the charge before Magistrate T. C. Englehart yesterday and was freed on $500 bond pending trial July 9. Mayor William Deaton of Christiansburg furnished the bond.

A large crowd stoned and besieged the Jenkins home at Christiansburg June 24, 1935, following the death of John Brelsford, Christiansburg laborer. Brelsford died after an altercation with Jenkins, who was exonerated by county officials.

Fleming, then pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, quieted the crowd until Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins were removed to Urbana. They have lived here since.

A. B. Hollis of Christiansburg is awaiting trial July 8 on a similar charge, filed at Troy by Marshall Jenkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins. Hollis pleaded innocent.

Basis of the suits were letters allegedly written by Mr. Fleming and Hollis to Urbana and Troy newspapers concerning the flight of the Jenkins' from their home.

COLUMBUS, O., June 30—The legislative committee of the Ohio County Auditors' association was ready today to recommend passage of a bill to defer real estate appraisals until 1942 and to present a plan for lifting county deficits.

Pearl A. Pratt of Lawrence county, chairman of the committee, said the bill to defer real estate appraisals would be recommended for passage by the senate. The house already has approved the measure. The bill gives the county commissioners and auditor authority to defer appraisals to 1942 if they deem it advisable.

One barn on the Ed Campbell farm near Brush Ridge was reported virtually demolished. Another on the Levi Hire farm between Brush Ridge and Morral was off the foundation. A barn on the Delphie Neff farm in that vicinity was damaged.

A dining room window of the Delphie Neff farm near Brush Ridge was blown in. The roof of a barn on the J. P. Robinson farm was partly torn away. One side of a barn on the Darius Wasnburn farm one mile west of Morral was torn away.

A tree was blown against the W. P. Whey residence in Morral and another was blown down in front of the Morral bank.

A barn on the Pearl Boganwright farm near Morral was damaged.

There were nine poles down on the telephone lines connecting Morral and Marion, and the community late this morning had been cut off from outside telephone communication for 12 hours.

Trees Block Road

The county engineer's office here reported the five-mile section of roadway linking Brush Ridge and Kirkpatrick was blocked by seven fallen trees. Motorists were able to get around some of them, but others still blocked the road this morning. These were being cleared.

The first east-west road south of the Brush Ridge-Kirkpatrick road was blocked by one tree, closing the road.

The Likens road, another east-west county highway north of Marion, was blocked by a tree.

In the Kirkpatrick vicinity, the county engineer's office received reports that roofs had been torn off barns and garages and that a number of trees had been blown down or uprooted. No lightning damage was reported in that vicinity. These roads were the only ones the county engineer's office was asked to clear.

Railroad Blocked

Operations on the Pennsylvania railroad between Marion and Bucyrus were paralyzed when the storm that swept through from Brush Ridge to Kirkpatrick blew over telegraph and telephone poles. The section hardest hit was between Harvey, four miles north of Marion, and Tobias, south of Bucyrus. In many cases poles were blown across the tracks. Penney workmen at noon were still working to repair the damage and restore communications along the line.

The C., D. & M. Electric Co. also suffered heavy damage through the same area. Limbs and trees blown across the power lines caused more than a dozen breaks, company officials reported this morning. Chief damage was between Brush Ridge and Wyandot. Three poles were down on this line. Repair crews were called out when the storm broke about 10:30 p. m. and were still at work at noon.

Highways Closed

Two main highways were closed near Marion for several hours this morning by fallen trees and limbs.

Federal route 30 S, better known as Harding Highway, was closed a mile west of Caledonia by trees and was not cleared until early this morning. Two highway patrolmen were there to warn motorists.

State route 4 connecting Marion and Bucyrus was closed for several hours about eight miles north of Marion. It was reported closed at midnight and was not cleared until several hours later. Highway patrolmen were on duty there to caution motorists.

Highway Patrolman H. R. Curtis remained on the desk at the Marion substation throughout the night to receive reports of blocked roads.

Marion county's maintenance crew employed by the state highway department was called out at 11 last night to start clearing roads. They were still busy late this morning.

Electric service in the East Center street section was cut off for an hour when a large limb blew across a line at Forest Lawn boulevard. Service in other sections of the city was disrupted for brief periods, but the East Center section was the only area in which lights were out for any length of time, company officials said.

City Not Hard Hit

Service Director John V. Ruth reported damage in the city was not extensive. He said his department had about 25 calls this morning for trucks to remove broken limbs. Trees were reported blown down in Marion on South Vine street near Lafayette street, temporarily blocking the street, and on West Church street near Orchard street where two were reported down, one of them leaning against a house.

While a path of damage was traceable from LaRue and Prospect northeastward across the county through Claridon and Caledonia, Waldo escaped with no damage of any consequence, according to reports from there this morning.

At Prospect the residence of Ray Welch on the Marion-Marysville road was hit by lightning shortly after midnight. The bolt followed in through an electric light line, and set fire to the house between the walls. Two rooms were damaged to the extent of $200 by the fire and the force of the bolt. The Prospect fire department was called to extinguish the blaze.

At Prospect a rainfall of 35 hundredths of an inch between midnight and 8 a. m. was continuing this morning.

Although a hard rain and heavy wind was reported at Waldo, damage was slight.

Trees Uprooted

At Claridon dozens of trees were uprooted. In the village cemetery a large wild cherry tree more than six feet in circumference was blown over. North of town on the DeVore farm eight trees were uprooted in a grove. Part of the roof was blown off a barn on the Ed Fields farm. Nine trees were blown down on the Lloyd Irey farm, two miles east of Claridon. Telephone lines also were hard hit, more than 50 poles being reported down in the vicinity.

The storm struck Claridon with such force that motorists experienced difficulty in keeping their cars on the road. The force of the wind and rain made steering difficult and reduced visibility to zero. Several motorists reported barely escaping falling limbs.

In the vicinity of Caledonia fallen trees for a time blocked the Harding highway. A barn on the Mrs. Stella Coast farm one mile west of Caledonia was blown off the foundation. Two miles west of the village a tree blown across the road tore down the telephone lines and nearer town four phone poles were down.

Village Isolated

With all telephone service disrupted and many roads blocked by fallen trees and limbs, Kirkpatrick was practically isolated this morning. All telephones in the village were out of order, the telephone company reported, and service had not been restored this afternoon.

The wind storm swept the entire county suddenly about 10:30 last night and lasted only a short time. This was followed early this morning by .53 of an inch of rainfall and an electrical and thunder storm which reached its peak of intensity about 3 a. m.

Temperatures, which yesterday ranged as high as 82, dropped to a low of 62 last night. A year ago the temperature range was from a high of 89 to a low of 66.

The government weather forecast is for general fair and cooler weather tonight, followed by fair and slightly warmer weather Wednesday.

NEIGHBOR COUNTIES HARD HIT BY WIND

Scherff furniture store and the Fred Stuckey hardware store—were partially unroofed, with water damage resulting to the upstairs apartments. The apartment above the Stuckey store is occupied by Mrs. Catherine Shively.

A barn on the Bernard Martin farm, six miles south of Upper Sandusky, was blown over, while a barn on the John Ulrich farm, three and one-half miles southwest, was demolished and the house and outbuildings damaged. Eight or 10 other barns in the area were damaged.

Window panes were shattered over the village by the wind, which blew steadily for about an hour. Rainfall of .9 of an inch was recorded. Six or eight large maple trees were blown down, one damaging the roof of the Presbyterian church.

Have Narrow Escape

Storm reports brought out an unusual experience of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kotterman, who were in a summer cabin five miles southeast of Upper Sandusky along the Sandusky river. Five trees surrounding the cabin were blown down, one striking the cabin, but the couple escaped without injury.

Telephone lines at Bucyrus were considerably damaged, while streets and highways leading in all directions were blocked by fallen trees. Forest also was in darkness for some time.

Two barns were partly unroofed near Mt. Gilead, one of them on the McWhirk farm, one mile south of the village. A few telephone lines were down, but light and power service was not interrupted. A report was made that several cows were killed by lightning on a farm near Mt. Gilead.

Galion Partly Dark

The southwest part of Galion was in darkness and highways and streets were blocked by fallen trees. A number of motorists were compelled to return to hotels for the night.

Electric current all over the city was shut off early this morning, because of so many fallen wires. The street department worked all night and was busy all of today clearing away debris. Many porches and gardens were damaged by the falling trees.

Much needed rain moistened dried fields in northern Ohio today, but drouth conditions grew worse in the southern portion of the state, the Associated Press reported.

Weather bureau officials said from a half inch to an inch of rain fell throughout the northern portion during the night. Cleveland had 1.30 inches.

Ohio State university agricultural experts said the rain practically insured farmers in that section of good crops. They added, however, that this area had been the least affected by Ohio's drouth.

The weather bureau could offer no indication when rains might be expected in southern Ohio. Parched fields and pasture lands in most of the central and all of the southern portions need at least an inch of rainfall.

The fruit section of Ottawa county received its first heavy rain in several weeks. Catawba Island and Danbury had more than half an inch.

Lightning killed six cows and a bull on the farm of Eber Dunlap near Shelby and farmers reported heavy damage from the wind.

ROOSEVELT RETURNS TO CAPITAL OFFICE

Both He and Landon Confer With Party Aids as Campaign Nears.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 30 — Amid moves far from suggestive of post-convention calm, President Roosevelt came back to the capital today while his friends and foes swung into action on a broad campaign front.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, his Republican opponent, met with their respective party associates yesterday and talked over the political situation.

At Hyde Park, N. Y., where the chief executive went for the week-end after receiving the acclaim of the Democrats at the close of the convention at Philadelphia, he received reports from Frank Murphy, commissioner to the Philippines, and Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois.

Murphy, former mayor of Detroit, said he told Mr. Roosevelt the Democrats would carry Michigan in November, while Horner forecast a party victory in Illinois.

Landon, working on his acceptance speech at a ranch retreat near Estes Park, Colo., conferred with W. S. Rosecrans, Los Angeles Republican, and planned a talk with Rep. William A. Ekwall, Oregon Republican. It was reported also that W. B. Bell of New York, chairman of the Republican finance committee, and Sen. Steiwer of Oregon, who was the Republican keynoter, soon would visit the Landon camp.

G-MEN MAY TAKE HAND TO NAB WOMEN FLOGGERS

Official Will Call in Federal Agents If Night Riders Are Found To Have Crossed State Line.

By The Associated Press

WILMINGTON, N. C., June 30—The G-men, nemesis of the big-time gangster may take a hand in ferreting out the members of a ruthless band of women-flogging night riders which has terrorized a small Columbus county community in recent months.

Solicitor J. J. Burney is now investigating the band's doings, which have just come to light, and Federal District Attorney J. O. Carr said today he was watching the evidence closely to determine if any of the victims were taken across the state line.

Clarendon, the village near where the night riders operated, is only a few miles from the South Carolina line. Carr said if there is a suggestion any victim was taken across the boundary the federal bureau of investigation would be asked to take a hand.

Solicitor Burney said that although the victims' fear of reprisal was hindering the investigation, the identity of several of the terrorists was known and that he would "fight to the bitter end" to break up the band and bring its members to trial.

The activities of the band did not come to the attention of authorities until a court trial at Whiteville, the county seat.

Mrs. Bertha Fowler, a witness, refused to take off her hat in the courtroom until the court ordered her. She removed it revealing she had been shorn of her hair.

At the subsequent grand jury investigation which Judge R. Hurt Parker ordered at once, she said nine cooked men dragged her and her 15-year-old daughter into a swamp, clipped their hair and flogged them after stripping their clothes from their backs.

This was only one of many instances of the band's depredations. Six victims—four women and two men — were questioned by the grand jury which recessed Friday until the August term of court. Hackett Applewhite, the foreman, said many more witnesses were to be examined. All the witnesses he said, were reticent because they feared the night-riders.

ACTION LIKELY ON WATER RATE

Council Is Expected To Adopt One of Four Proposals at Meeting Tonight.

City council, at a special meeting tonight, is expected to adopt one of four proposed water rate ordinances that would cut the annual gross revenue of the Marion Water Co. from 12.5 to 19.3 per cent after present rates expire on July 31.

Adoption of one of the four proposals worked out by Mayor Frederick C. Smith, City Clerk Harry Brookshire and other officials, is expected in view of the plans of officials to put the city "on the defensive" if a water rate fight develops before the state utilities commission.

Although council's action tonight is regarded largely a protective step to put the burden of a possible rate fight on the water company, it will disclose for the first time how much of a reduction the administration will try to get. Council members have indicated they probably will try for a reduction they can reasonably hope to get rather than fight for a big reduction that the commission might regard as unreasonable.

Four separate proposals and their effect on the company's gross income were worked out to give council members a variety of possible reductions from which to choose, officials explained.

In commenting on what was described as an effort to put the city "on the defensive" in the event of a rate fight, officials explained that if the city files a proposed rate with the state utilities commission before July 31 when the present rates expire, it will be up to the water company to attack that rate if it does not meet the company's approval. If council would not file a rate with the commission, the company probably would file one after the present rates expire, and it would be up to the city to attack the company's proposal if a fight before the commission develops. City Solicitor Ralph E. Carhart has urged that the city act first, contending the city would be at less expense in a rate fight if that course is followed.

It is expected that council will adopt one of the four proposals because action will be necessary tonight to permit the city to file its proposed rate schedule with the state utilities commission before the present rates expire. If a rate ordinance is adopted tonight, it will not become effective under the law until 30 days from now, which would leave only one day for the city to file it with the commission before present rates expire, it was pointed out.

SWING TO ROOSEVELT STARTED DILL'S WOES

By The Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash., June 30—The California-Texas swing to Roosevelt at Chicago in 1932 was singled out today by former Sen. C. C. Dill, suing for divorce, as the point where his matrimonial trouble began.

The former senator was up for further cross-examination today on his testimony dating his marital rift from that development at the 1932 Democratic national convention.

Dill, one of the group whose conference swung John N. Garner's strength behind Franklin D. Roosevelt, said his wife, a former suffragette leader, denounced him and others of the group as "political crooks and double-crossers."

She thought Roosevelt was all right, he said, until he declined with a "polite excuse" her request that he speak on a peace league radio program. Dill said it might have been embarrassing to Roosevelt as a presidential candidate.

Mrs. Dill is contesting the divorce action.

The former senator said his wife's carping criticism of President Roosevelt and of his own political convictions led him to refuse to run in 1934.

CALEDONIA BUILDING, LOAN TO FEDERALIZE

Stockholders Approve Step Which Will Provide Insurance Up to $5,000.

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, June 30—Application to the federal government for a charter which will designate the Bucyrus Loan and Building Co., as a federal concern and which will provide insurance to depositors up to $5,000, was approved by the stockholders who met at the common pleas court room Monday night.

The unanimous vote to federalize the local concern, the first Bucyrus loan company to take such a step, was taken after the move was explained by Robert B. Jacoby of Cincinnati, formerly of Marion, chief counsel of the Federal Home Loan bank of Cincinnati.

Frank Hopley, president of the company, presided and preliminary to balloting on the issue, explained that federal auditors had examined the books of the company and appraisers had been in the city looking over real estate values and had reported to their respective offices that the local company was 100 per cent sound and secure.

The Bucyrus concern is the second in the county to take such steps, a Galion loan company having already federalized.

James, 12, who was severely burned, was sent home from Peoples' hospital after being treated.

A third boy found some fireworks and sold these to the Antrobius boys, police were told.

George held a fourteen-inch section of water pipe, into the powder from five of the fire-crackers had been placed. James applied a match.

A flash was followed by a blast and eight of George's fingers were torn off. His other two were amputated later, police said.

CONGRESSMAN FROM IOWA IS STRICKEN

By The Associated Press

ROCHESTER, Minn., June 30—Rep. B. M. Jacobsen, Democrat of Iowa, died at a hospital here today.

The 74-year-old Iowa representative, who won renomination for a fourth term in his party's primary June 1, had been ill for some time and came to Rochester about a week ago.

A native of Germany, Jacobsen chose to regard his own achievements in politics and business as proof of the opportunities for success of a poor immigrant boy in the United States.

In the 1930 general election he defeated Rep. B. F. Leth to become the only Iowa member of the Democratic party in the 72nd congress.

GUARDS SCOUR HILLS FOR RIFLE "NESTS"

Deputies Sworn in by Sheriff Act To Keep Order at Portsmouth.

By The Associated Press

PORTSMOUTH, O., June 30—Official deputies sworn in to aid Sheriff Arthur Oakes patroled the two-mile long New Boston plant of the Wheeling Steel Corp. today, bent on maintaining order after a search for rifle "nests" on a hill overlooking the concern.

The sheriff and 25 deputies covered all sections of a hill overlooking the plant. Oakes said while no arms were discovered, he found traces indicating that a large group of men had been on the hillside.

Meanwhile, a challenge of the authority of the national labor relations board by department councils of the factory was before the U. S. circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati.

The department councils, in an appeal filed yesterday, hold that a "cease and desist" order issued by the board May 12 be set aside as it was not supported by the evidence. The corporation recently filed a similar petition.

The labor board, a few days before the strike threw 5,500 men out of work, resulting in one killing and beatings and bombing, ordered the concern to refrain from restraining employes in the formation of labor organizations.

Earl F. Read, attorney for the concern, said at Pittsburgh last night that he believed 25 or 30 men were "guilty of being an accessory to murder" in connection with the fatal shooting of a company guard last week.

EDUCATORS STRIKE AT NEW OATH LAW

Urge Teachers To Fight for Liberty of Expression in Nation's Schools.

By The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore., June 30—Resentment at the congressional "red rider" limiting teachers of governmental science in the District of Columbia was expressed last night at the 74th annual convention of the National Education association.

John W. Studebaker, United States commissioner of education, and Thomas W. Gosling, national director of the American Junior Red Cross, in addresses, flayed "dictatorship" in teaching.

"I am certainly not contending for the establishment of or advocacy of Communism," Studebaker said. "But I do wish to point out that the implications of the situation in the District of Columbia are of great significance to all citizens who conscientiously try to bring a definition of education into harmony with our traditional concept of American democracy.

"If democracy means freedom to inquire, to learn, to express oneself then we can tolerate no dictatorial censorship of thinking and learning."

Gosling, who said teachers of the District of Columbia are required each month to state under oath they have not taught Communism to their pupils, declared:

WISCONSIN SET TO INSURE JOBS

400,000 Workers To Be Eligible for Benefits If They Lose Their Posts.

By The Associated Press

MADISON, Wis., June 30 — Wisconsin's new unemployment insurance law—the nation's first—goes into effect Wednesday.

Four hundred thousand workers will be eligible to receive benefits under its provisions if they lose their jobs after it begins to operate on July 1.

A $12,000,000 fund will be on hand if payments are needed on the first day.

This cozy nest egg was built up by Wisconsin employers under the state unemployment insurance law since 1934. The pioneer statute took hold then to cover employers of 10 or more persons long before enactment of the federal unemployment insurance clause in the national social security act.

The Wisconsin law was placed on the statute books by the 1931 special session of the legislature. Enforcement was delayed by the succeeding legislature until 1934 because industry found itself financially unable to assume the cost.

In 1934 the employers began contributing up to 2 per cent of their monthly pay rolls toward separate reserve accounts which have now reached $12,000,000 and will increase as time goes on.

The 1935 legislature amended the act to dovetail with the federal law. Full operation of the statute thus was delayed from July 1 to the same date this year.

Approximately 3,000 employers are affected and the 400,000 workers potentially eligible for assistance if they lose their jobs are those earning an average of $1,500 a year or less.

The minimum benefit is $5 a week. This is increased to $10 for those whose full time pay is $25 a week; to $12.50 for average pay of $25 to $30 a week; and to $15, the top rate, for workers who normally receive $30 a week.

Vacation.

RECENTLY I TOLD you about the importance of having a daily routine of activity for the young child during summer vacation. When school closes the child is confronted with the problem of what to do with his time. Too often the leisure of vacation leads to loss of routine and neglect of the general health.

I am glad to say that many agencies have recognized the importance of summer play with proper supervision of the growing child. Organized play and rest prevent the physical, mental and moral slump that may result from a long vacation.

Among the outstanding organizations in this field is the child Study association of New York City. Similar organizations are now being formed throughout the country. It is hoped that every community, regardless of how small it is, may make some provision for the child population during the summer months.

Summer play schools have many advantages. The health is given first consideration. Each child has a complete physical examination before the school opens. If any defect is found he is put in the way of its correction.

The children are placed on a daily routine. This includes a hot lunch, a rest period, then a shower or a swim. In most instances milk is given in the mid-afternoon.

Children who show unusual signs of fatigue, restlessness or physical discomfort are watched closely and helped in every manner. Properly-organized games are encouraged.

Many a child attending a summer play school gives evidence of talents which may have been unsuspected during the school year. He develops qualities of leadership, good sportsmanship and a dozen other latent talents.

I strongly recommend the formation of these play schools. It is not necessary to have a large and expensive staff. Volunteers will be found. A minimum of expenditure is needed to provide this means of health and social development to any community. I am more than confident that as a result of such a program many children will spend a more healthful and happy summer than ever before.

Let me urge upon you the need of rest, food, fresh air and sunshine for all growing children. Vacation is the ideal time for the development of strong and sturdy muscles. The child, if properly directed, will benefit in many ways and return to school adequately prepared for a year of hard work.

Children Set for Opening Of Playground Program

Project Sponsored by WPA Gets Under Way in City; County To Be Included.

Marion "kids" were set to flock to city and village parks this week to inaugurate a summer of play under an expertly supervised recreational program set up by the federal works progress administration.

The playground project opened in the city today and will get under way in the villages of the county later this week.

When the parents of the city and rural districts realize what we have instituted for their children we expect a "full house" daily, Martin Verburg of 444 Girard avenue, general supervisor of the government's program, said.

The playground program will be carried on daily except Saturday and Sunday from 9 to 11:30 a. m. and 1 to 4:30 p. m. On Saturdays from 9 to 11:30 a. m. supervisors and leaders will hold a roundtable conference and report on the progress of their groups and exchange ideas for improving the program.

Mr. Verburg emphasized that the playground project is a program for everybody. There is no age limit, he said. One of the principal features is a special group for children of pre-school age. This is under the leadership of persons especially trained in nursery work.

Heads of Divisions

Miss Jean Drake of Marion, a student at Ohio State university who specializes in physical education and recreational work, is in charge of the girls' and womens' division. She will conduct first aid classes for playground leaders at the Y. M. C. A. every Wednesday and Friday night from 7 to 8:30. Carl Cramer, Harding High school football coach, is in charge of the boys' and men's division. Clarence Lenz has supervision of the playground work in the rural districts.

The three Marion city parks, Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley, and the Marion Steam Shovel recreation field are being utilized by WPA for its playground program. Eight leaders have been assigned to each park and the shovel company field. An evening recreation program is to be carried on at the latter field and if there is demand for a similar program in all of the parks one will be worked out, Mr. Verburg said.

Colored residents in the west side of the city have requested that a field in their neighborhood be set-up as a playground and included in the new project. A program for colored children is being carried on at Lincoln park. Mr. Verburg said he will investigate the new request and if the demand is sufficient steps will be taken to grant it.

All of the playground leaders have received a course of training at Ohio Wesleyan university preparatory to launching the program that began today. There are leaders schooled in boys' work, in girls' work, for the nursery program and others.

Program Is Varied

The project includes all playground features, music, art, handicraft, physical activities, hobbies, folk dancing and singing, baseball, volley ball, croquet and many other features. Virtually all of the equipment now in use in the parks has been furnished by the WPA. It includes recreation balls and nets, volley balls and nets, horseshoes, whistles and other playground articles. Sandboxes are being built where they are needed.

The project is still short on equipment, Mr. Verburg explained, and a tag day will be held July 11 to obtain funds to purchase needed materials. The tag day will be sponsored by the playground group and the national youth administration.

A playground project comparable to the one in Marion city has been set up in LaRue, Prospect and Caledonia, and one is in preparation for Waldo. The Prospect program is to open Wednesday, the one at LaRue later this week, and the Caledonia program next Monday. Complete details of the project in the villages and personnel of the staff of leaders will be announced by Supervisor Clarence Lenz within a few days.

All supervisors and leaders held a meeting yesterday morning to complete their plans for today's opening and yesterday afternoon contacted residents and invited them to send their children to the parks daily. "We urge parents to send their children to us daily and we give them a well-supervised and beneficial recreational program," Mr. Verburg said.

Sims of Bennett street, Marion, which opened in the Union county common pleas court Saturday afternoon. Twenty-four witnesses, four of them from Marion county, were subpoenaed.

Former Marion Resident Looks Like Alf Landon

Fred N. Landon, a former Marion man now living in Sunbury, Pa., is in the spotlight these days because of his resemblance to Gov. Alfred M. Landon, the Republican presidential nominee, according to news reports from Sunbury.

Mr. Landon, a son of Lyman Landon of northwest of Meeker, frequently has been mistaken for the governor and has had varied experiences as a result. A story in a Sunbury newspaper describes Mr. Landon as having the same general physical characteristics as Gov. Landon. Both men wear the same type of glasses, the story states.

Mr. Landon is distantly related to the governor, the grandfathers of the two men having been brothers. Mr. Landon was chief clerk of the Susquehanna Silk Mills in its early days here, and has been in Sunbury for about 30 years. He is employed in the division engineer's office of the Pennsylvania railroad.

CLEVELANDER JAILED AFTER BOSS' DEATH

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, June 30—Police Detective H. G. Weltzel said today that formal charges would be placed against Albert R. Zautner, 70-year-old night watchman for the Lincoln Fireproof Storage Co., after the slaying late yesterday of George A. Rutherford, 55, company president, in his office.

Lloyd H. Pease, warehouse superintendent, also was shot through the left groin. Attaches at Polyclinic hospital said the wound was not serious.

W. R. Thomas, vice president of the storage company, said the shooting occurred after he (Thomas) had rebuked Zautner for being intoxicated when he reported for duty. The watchman was held at city jail.

Coroner A. J. Pearz said one bullet was fired into Rutherford's body, entering the left side of his chest and penetrating the heart.

Detectives Sergeant Hogan said the pistol used was one of three kept in the upper lefthand drawer of Rutherford's desk. It was the custom for the night watchman to carry one of the weapons as he made his rounds through the warehouse, Hogan said.

LABOR BOARD LOSES IN OHIO DISPUTE

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, O., June 30—The U. S. circuit court of appeals held today that the national labor relations board lacked authority to issue orders affecting companies whose business "does not directly affect any phase of any interstate commerce."

It dismissed a petition of the board asking enforcement of an order it issued to Fruehauf Trailer Co. of Detroit and directed that the order be set aside.

The Fruehauf company attacked the constitutionality of the national labor relations act in appealing from the order of the board.

NEGUS BOOED BEFORE LEAGUE

Gallery Hostile to Selassie Who Says He Fought Battle of Small Nations.

By The Associated Press

GENEVA, June 30—Little Haile Selassie of Ethiopia faced down a hostile demonstration by spectators in the League of Nations' assembly today to declare he had been fighting the cause of small countries faced by powerful invaders.

His first words were drowned by an uproar that threw the assemblage of statesmen into confusion.

Police went into action in the galleries and arrested a number of alleged Fascists charged with the catcalling demonstration.

Didn't Want War

When he again could be heard, Haile Selassie spoke quietly in a rather flat voice. He devoted much of his speech to a recapitulation of the developments leading to the Italian conquest of Ethiopia. Then he said:

"I did not wish the war that was imposed upon me. In this struggle I have been fighting the cause of all small countries against the greed of a powerful invader."

Before he went to the rostrum, he heard the conquest of his nation described as "a sacred mission of civilization."

This declaration was contained in a memorandum from the Italian government. It was read to the assembly while the little man who had been "king of kings" sat in the fifth row.

Had "Sacred Mission"

The Italian note said Italy "views the work she has undertaken in Ethiopia as a sacred mission of civilization" and the work will be carried out "according to the principles of the league covenant."

New, if conflicting, reports about possible restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty in Austria gained sudden attention among League of Nations delegates.

Gathering for this evening's opening session of the league assembly called to dispose of anti-Italian sanctions, the delegates heard that Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria might come to Geneva to confer with Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary, and Leon Blum, new French premier.

One version of the reported visit said Schuschnigg was seeking British and French backing for the enthronement of the Hapsburg heir presumptive, Archduke Otto, in Vienna.

Another version had it that Eden and Blum, anxious lest Schuschnigg be planning an early attempt at Hapsburg restoration, wanted to persuade him to refrain from making it in the present precarious atmosphere of Europe.

Varied Food Combinations Suggested by Mrs. Thurn

Dear Ethel: Is in Marion

Variety is the spice of life," and the interest of the family in meals depends on your ingenuity. Meals and vitamins are important, but good building, energy and flavor. This combination will go a long way toward planning well varied meals.

A delightful hostess of my acquaintance has made a food chart of combinations that are appealing in variety. I am passing her suggestions on to you with the hope that you will find new delight in planning the family meals. Recipes will only be given for foods not to be found in the ordinary good cookbook.

To Serve With Beef.

Accompaniment: Yorkshire Pudding, Horseradish Sauce, Mushroom gravy, plum butter; spiced grapes or spiced apples.

Spiced grapes are prepared by first washing large bunches of seedless grapes. Place them in a quart jar but do not pack down as they will loosen from the stem. Pour over a highly spiced vinegar, boiling the same as would be used for pickled peaches. Seal. Spiced grapes look most attractive when served as a garnish for a roast of beef.

Vegetables: Spinach takes on interest when pressed into a ring mold the center filled with potato balls and the border completed with hard cooked eggs in circles. Eggplant—stuffed and served in its shell. Dry grated cheese, mixed with the buttered bread crumbs gives a distinctive flavor. Macaroni—baked in custard cups and turn out on a crisp plate. Garnish these with fresh tomatoes or baked tomatoes filled with a corn mixture. Squash, beans, beets, asparagus and creamed onions are good combinations.

To Serve With Steak.

Accompaniment: Melted butter into which has been grated a very small amount of onion just before serving. Onion juice can also be served and this may be obtained by first grating the onion, then pressing the juice through cheese cloth. Mushroom sauce that is highly seasoned. This sauce should always be one of the brown sauces, the mushrooms are sauted and added to the sauce just before serving. French fried potatoes and French fried onions are universal favorites.

French Fried Onions

Select a large onion of the white variety. Peel and cut into slices one-fourth inch thick. Separate slices into rings and soak in milk for half hour. This will make the onion more delicate in flavor, also crisp. Drain off milk which may then be used for a sauce or cream soup, and dredge onion rings in flour. Fry in deep fat heated to 375 degrees F. or that will brown a cube of bread as you slowly count 60. A too hot fat will brown them quickly but they will not remain crisp. Drain on unglazed paper and salt just before serving.

To Serve with Roast Lamb.

Accompaniments: Slice oranges one-fourth inch thick leaving the peeling on. Place a tablespoon of current jelly in the center. Use the orange slices as a border for the roast. Mint sauce is served from a sauce boat and made by heating vinegar, adding seasonings to taste and to each cup of vinegar used, two tablespoons of finely chopped fresh mint leaves are added when the vinegar is taken from the stove.

A boned leg of lamb stuffed with a mint dressing is somewhat different and tasty. Select a leg of lamb and have it boned at the market. Salt inside and out and stuff.

Mint Stuffing.

To four cups of soft bread crumbs, add one-half teaspoon of sage, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon of pepper; one tablespoon finely minced onion, one teaspoon baking powder; one egg slightly beaten; one-fourth cup melted shortening or butter. Mix well and add one-fourth cup chopped mint leaves.

Vegetables: Diced carrots and turnip balls; fluffy rice; green peas; paprika potato balls or mashed potatoes that have been well seasoned with salt, pepper and butter and finely chopped green pepper added.

To Serve with Roast Pork.

Accompaniments: Apple croquettes; apple sauce; spiced crab apples or banana croquettes garnished with cranberry cubes.

Banana Croquettes.

Remove skins from bananas, allowing two halves to each person. Cut in half, rounding at both ends. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Dip in flour, then in slightly beaten egg to which has been added two tablespoons of milk. Roll in fine bread crumbs. Allow to dry, dip and roll again. Fry in deep fat that has been heated to a temperature of 385 degrees F. Serve on platter with the pork.

Vegetables: Green cabbage; lima beans; corn on the cob; succotash; cauliflower that has been boiled whole and surrounded with finely shredded carrots also boiled in a small amount of water for five minutes then drained. Pour a butter sauce over all.

Appearance of Food.

When the meal has been planned, it is always a good idea to picture mentally the finished product. This operation will prevent colorless meals or ones that conflict in color.

Mrs. George Thurn

TO CLEAN GAS BURNERS.

Remove burners from sockets and boil in a sudsy water. Then with a metal skewer, clean the small openings and thoroughly dry. Clean burners give even heat and prevent burning of foods.

SUBSTITUTE INGREDIENTS.

One teaspoon of baking powder equals one-third teaspoon of soda and one-half teaspoon cream of tartar. Three tablespoons of cocoa and one tablespoon of fat equals one ounce of bitter chocolate.

MURDER TONIGHT
BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

(Copyright, 1936, Lawrence W. Meynell)

SYNOPSIS: Inspector Hylton has found at least two persons, Captain Reeves and Dale Shipley, who have had trouble with old Arthur Burdett, since that ancient skinflint just has been murdered, the inspector is interested. And now Burdett's solicitor returns from France, hears of the murder, and arrives at the police cottage in Hope Enderton with a copy of Arthur Burdett's latest will—plus a good deal of excitement.

* * *

CHAPTER SIXTEEN.

New Scent

"I WANT it to be clearly understood," he said almost severely, "that I am doing this on your orders and authority as a police officer and that no initiative rests with me in the matter whatsoever. Do you agree?"

"Dear Mr. Hanley," Hylton laughed, "a policeman's life is practically one long round of irregularities. I'll take full responsibility for looking at the will—so go ahead."

"Very well." The mere familiar feel of a legal document seemed to give little Hanley more confidence and clearing his throat he read aloud:

"This is the last will and testament of me, Arthur Clayton Caldershott Burdett of Enderton Court Hope Enderton in the County of Sussex made this twelfth day of January in the year of Our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-six. I hereby specifically revoke the will and testament made by me on the twenty-second days of February, 1922. I appoint my solicitor Quinton Eustache Hanley of the firm of Hanley & Payne, Morechester to be my executor and I direct that all my debts and funeral expenses shall be paid as soon as reasonably possible after my decease."

"I insisted on that clause being included," Mr Hanley said almost fiercely.

"So far it's all cackle," Hylton said, "when do we come to the 'asses?"

"The gist or vital essence of the matter," Quinton Hanley said repressively, "now follows. The wording, you will please understand, is exactly as Mr Burdett wished it himself:

"'In my previous will I left all my property and possessions whatsoever to my half nephew Dale Shipley, but owing to that young man's insufferable rudeness, his bad temper and even threats used towards me this day, I have decided that he shall not benefit by my death to the extent of one penny. All my property and possessions whatsoever therefore I hereby give and bequeath to Andrew Lumsdale, my manservant, at present in my employ, who at least is reasonably honest and keeps a civil tongue in his head.'

"And that," said Quinton Hanley, as he folded the document carefully and put it back in its long envelope, "is all."

* * *

The inspector whistled; he was beginning to be excited. "Well, it's a pretty good beginning," he said. "Who witnessed this will, Mr. Hanley?"

"Two of the clerks in my office. It was witnessed, and duly executed there and then."

"Did young Shipley know about it?"

"That I can't say. But I am afraid it would be very unlike Arthur Burdett to do anyone a bad turn and not tell them about it."

Hylton nodded; he could imagine that to be true well enough.

"And Lumsdale, did he know?"

"There again I can't say."

"How much was the old boy worth?"

"From what I know already as his legal advisor I should be very much surprised if the total is less than sixty thousand pounds."

"Sixty thousand! Then Lumsdale's a rich man. How much used the old miser keep in his safe up at the house?"

"I haven't an idea what Mr. Burdett did about that."

"Um. When will this will be made public, Mr. Hanley?"

"When I as executor apply for probate."

"Well, don't start applying yet," Hylton said crisply. "We want to keep all this under our hats for a bit."

"I hope I appreciate the value of discretion as much as anybody," Quinton Hanley said. "I feel that I have done my duty by coming here, and however unpleasant a task may be that feeling is some sort of consolation. I wish you good evening, gentlemen."

He bowed, not without a sort of comic dignity and attended by Sergeant White made his way out to his car.

* * *

When the sergeant came back into the office he found Kingsley Hylton pacing up and down animatedly, an unlit cigar between his lips.

"By gad, sergeant, this makes you think a bit," he cried.

"You consider it very important, sir?"

The inspector glanced at James White almost in annoyance. "Well damn it all, man," he exploded, "it gives us what we haven't had a ghost of yet—real motive. Two motives for that matter, and two of the strongest—greed and anger. We must look a little more closely into Andrew Lumsdale's story. And what do you suppose Mr. Dale Shipley was doing that evening?"

"He was dining with Captain Reeves."

"Yes . . . with Reeves, eh? . . . and I also happen to 'know' that Andrew Lumsdale spent the entire time from say three till half past seven in Morechester, but, sergeant, I don't quite trust that knowledge now. Do you play chess?"

"Yes, sir, I do."

"Good. Perry said you did. Let's have a game now; it's wonderfully good for clearing one's brain." A little surprised, but nothing loath, White answered, "All right, sir."

In the living room White produced the board and men from a drawer and set them out on the table; then each man settled down and there was something about the other's attitude that warned Kingsley Hylton he might be in for a surprise.

Very little conversation was heard for the next eighty minutes. Then James White leaned back and said, "I think you'll find that's mate, inspector."

Secretly, Hylton was just a shade chagrined; he rather prided himself on his chess and it was some time since he had been beaten in a game.

"Oh, just a bit of luck," James White said modestly, but it was humanly impossible to keep a hint of pleasure out of his voice.

"Luck for the Law, eh?" Hylton ruminated. "Well, I dare say we shall need it all before we're finished with this case."

Hylton checks up Andrew Lumsdale, tomorrow.

"I insisted on that clause being included."

Married Comrades

BY ADELE GARRISON

Ronald and Madge Leave Men After Lunch for Their Talk Alone.

"YOU MUSTN'T let Hector become a nuisance. Miss Whitton said with concern as the parrot nestled his head closer into my neck, and appeared to be preparing to go to sleep on my shoulder.

"He couldn't be," I told her, and was rewarded by the gleam of pleasure that came into her eyes. I guessed that the birds were very dear to the heart of this bustling, energetic, but perhaps lonely spinster, and that she had a warm spot in that heart for anyone who appreciated her pets.

"I like to have him there," I went on, and found to my amazement that I was speaking truthfully. Whether it was vanity or kindliness speaking, I did not know, but I was conscious of a heady thrill of triumph because a creature usually so shy should have taken an decided a fancy to me.

"I think I shall wait until he gets tired of me," I told her smiling, and then the first course of our luncheon was set before us, and I joined the men in demolishing it.

For the duration of the luncheon I ate with the parrot perched upon my shoulder, while my husband, Samuel Brixton and Ronald watched me with eyes amused, a bit apprehensive, and in my husband's case, affectionate. It was not until we were almost finished with the dessert that the bird made the slightest movement.

Knows Time to Go.

Then, as if it sensed that it was time to leave, the creature made its ungainly progress down my arm, croaked an uncanny "Good-by," and made its way down the tablecloth to the floor, and from there to the desk where Miss Whitton sat.

"Good thing that," Dicky said. "He knows the party's over."

I caught his eye and gave him our private signal which means that I want to speak to him alone. He nodded imperceptibly to the others, and a little later, when we had risen from the table, he adroitly managed to get near enough for me to murmur unheard by the Brixtons.

"Ronald wants to speak to me, alone," I said, and Dicky murmured back in the same fashion. "Okay. I'll fix it."

For a minute or two we all chatted together after Dicky had paid the bill and then Dicky, without appearing to make an effort whatever, managed to walk Samuel Brixton away toward the book case on the wall with the patent pretext of examining the old volumes which it contained. Watching them, I touched Ronald's arm, and then went swiftly into the other room out of their sight.

"Let's go on out to the cars," I said softly, and then spoke for the benefit of the attendant at the door.

"Will you kindly tell the others of our party that we have gone out to the car?" I said. "They are looking at the books, and I have no idea how long they will be."

Ronald Grateful.

"They probably haven't either," she said, smiling. "Most people don't when they get in front of those old bookcases."

It will probably be dark before my husband remembers where he is," I said with an answering smile, and then Ronald and I were outside and walking swiftly toward the waiting cars.

"You would better be in your own car," he said. "Then you will be all ready to start back, dash! you don't know how grateful I am to you and Mr Graham for bringing dad up here."

"Don't think or speak of it again," I said warmly. "I am so glad we just happened to be on hand. It really seemed Providential."

"You were the Providence," he said shyly, and I spoke with swift sharpness.

"You mustn't forget," I said, "that you wanted to speak to me alone. I must warn you that we have very little time. My husband will keep your stepfather in there as long as possible, but you know how impatient he will be to get home to your mother."

Reds Knock Cubs Out Of Clear Title To League Lead

33,468 FANS LOOK ON AS CINCINNATI WINS SEVENTH STRAIGHT

Players Appear in Bright New Uniforms in Game Under Lights

By The Associated Press

In spite of the verbal brickbats that have been tossed at the Cincinnati Reds for their night game their red pants their fireworks and the rest of their display Chuck Dressen's club is rapidly becoming an important factor in the National league pennant race

The Reds sudden rise has been one of the big surprises of the 1936 season but even more surprising is the fact that Dressen has been able to build up a dangerous ball club without digging deeply into owner Powell Crosley's bankroll

Playing before the biggest crowd that has seen a game in Cincinnati since 1928 33468 the Reds again showed their strength last night by turning back the Chicago Cubs 4 to 3 in a duel between Paul Derringer and Curt Davis It was Cincinnati's seventh straight victory and put the Reds only half a game behind the fourth place New York Giants in addition to knocking the Cubs back into a tie with the Cardinals after one day of clear possession of the National league lead

All other major league clubs were idle yesterday as rain removed the only other scheduled contest between the Tigers and the White Sox

For six innings Davis and Derringer engaged in a brilliant mound battle with the Cubs holding a slight edge over Cincinnati's collection of young players who have broken into the majors in the last year or two and castoffs of other clubs The Cubs were first to break the deadlock scoring a run in the seventh on Jimmy O Dea's single and Johnny's Gill's double

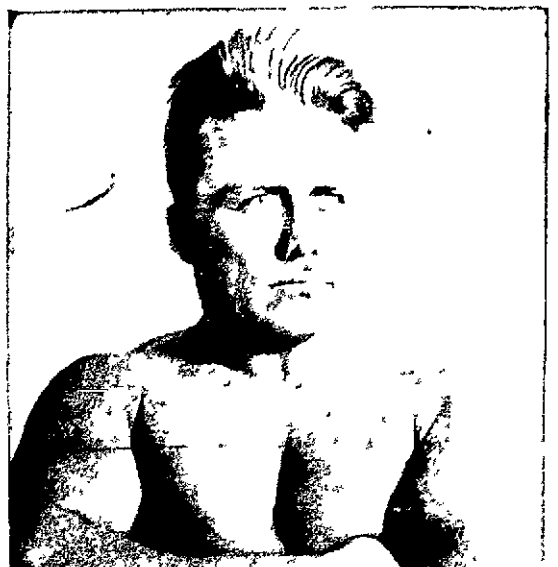
The Cubs cracked completely in the last half of the inning and piled three errors on top of four Cincinnati hits to give the Reds all their runs Singles by Ival Goodman Les Scarsella and Babe Herman opened the rally

Three doubles into the overflow crowd which made ground rules necessary gave Chicago two runs in the eighth but Derringer tightened up and stopped them short of a tie

* * *

The Reds who brought night baseball and fireworks into the majors and made the other clubs and the fans like them injected a new sartorial note into the proceedings They came out with their long heralded new uniforms —red pants and creamy white shirts—rivaling the gaudiest display seen on the football fields The customers approved of them too

Everett Marshall Floors Ali Baba in Title Tilt



EVERETT MARSHALL

By ERNIE HOWELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS O June 30—Stanislaus Zbyszko fell on Ali Baba last night

That's why Everett Marshall the big blond from La Junta Colo was wearing two world champion ship wrestling belts both diamond studded today

Ali Baba the Turk with the handlebar mustache who copped the heavyweight crown from Dick Shikat of Germany in Madison Square Garden a couple of months ago surrendered his claims last night in 30 minutes and 20 seconds when the Colorado youth nailed him with a body slam and cross body pin

A crowd of 8763 paid more than $20 000 to see the title claim charge hands and they witnessed a match that was Marshall's all the way Ali Baba fell victim to three full Nelsons in a row just before the finish and was unable to fight off Marshall's champ ionship bid

The Turk dashed for the ropes once while tied up in the full Nelson and tumbled through to the ground He landed on his hand and needed a count of five before he could climb back into the ring Marshall rubbed him as he returned lifted him high in the air slammed him to mat with a third and fell across him for the fall

As a result of the victory Marshall retained the world championship belt presented him by the Colorado commission and won the belt offered by the Midwest Wrestling association If the New York and affiliated commissions recognize Marshall's claims he will be one of the first men in history to hold an undisputed championship as a heavyweight wrestler

I AGREE WITH YOU, DOCTOR - BULLION IS WORKING TOO HARD — IT IS VITAL THAT HE HAS MORE REST AND RELAXATION
I SUGGESTED AN OCEAN VOYAGE, BUT HE ONLY LAUGHED AT ME. HE IS A GREAT FINANCIER, BUT LIKE MANY GREAT MEN - HE VALUES EVERYTHING EXCEPT GOOD HEALTH
WE WILL HAVE TO SPEAK TO HIM AGAIN AND TRY TO HAVE HIM REALIZE THAT IN SPITE OF THE FACT THAT HE THINKS HE CAN CONTINUE TO WORK EIGHTEEN HOURS A DAY HIS HEART WILL NOT STAND THE STRAIN
I AM SORRY, MISS ANNIE, BUT MR. BULLION HAS LEFT FOR THE DAY
HE DIDN'T LEAVE ANY MESSAGE
BUT I GOTTA SEE HIM - HONEST, I JUST GOTTA

MILD RISE LED BY SPECIALTIES

Preferred Utility Issues in Demand as Better Business Brings Hope of Payments.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 30—Specialties tipped the stock market scales for substantial gains today but many of the leaders failed to make weight on the up-side.

Increased dividends and earnings spurred a number of issues.

Several utility preferreds came to the fore as better business revived hopes of adjusted back payments or resumptions to stockholders.

Chrysler moved briskly for awhile, then halved an early advance of more than a point. The other motors did little.

Among utility preference shares up 2 to 3 points were those of Standard Gas, American Power & Light, Electric Power & Light and Engineers Public Service.

Others, ahead fractions to 2 or so, included American Telephone, du Pont, Westinghouse, American Can, Commercial Credit, S. H. Kress, Greyhound Corp. Underwood-Elliott-Fisher, Douglas Aircraft, Borg-Warner, U. S. Smelting, Union Carbide and Bethlehem.

A. O. Smith dropped more than 4, Allied Chemical 2, and Dome, Owens Illinois and Schenley about 1 each.

The bond division was without definite trends although several earlier loans were in demand. Commodities and foreign currencies were mixed.

The steel labor controversy held the limelight in brokerage quarters with guesses varied as to the outcome.

The French franc, at 6.63 cents, was off .00½ of a cent at the beginning of foreign exchange dealings. Sterling was ½ of a cent lower at $5.02.
